

Top Things to Do at Ocean Shores, Washington

Ocean Shores, Washington, a 6-mile-long peninsula bordered by the Pacific Ocean and Grays Harbor, is a small town located right on the coast of the Pacific Ocean in Washington State. It is Washington State's number one destination for beach enthusiasts, as it features easy access to over six miles of sandy beaches and there are many fun activities for people of all ages that can be done at Ocean Shores. Ocean Shores sits on a peninsula off the Washington coast and welcomes more than 3 million visitors annually. Its climate is mild; never too hot or cold. Summers stay pleasantly just under 80 degrees. Features of this area include two lakes, 23 miles of canals and a rain forest in the center of the city. Residents and visitors to Ocean Shores will find plenty to do besides go to the beach. Among other options, they can enjoy miniature golf, horseback riding, boating and hiking. Here is a list of the top ten things to do at Ocean Shores. The city offers golf, birdwatching and a host of curious antique shops. With more than 17 annual shows and festivals, there is always something to do in this small town.

- 1) Riding the waves: The waves at Ocean Shores are magnificent for Boogie board surfing and easy to ride with a decent board. In August the water temperature is pretty decent, warm enough to go out in just a bathing suit, but since you never really know what the weather will be like there it's advisable to wear a wetsuit. There is a surf shop in town where you can buy or rent surf boards, boogie boards, beach skimmers, and wetsuits. The rental fees are pretty cheap if you rent by the day. Boogie board surfing is awesome at Ocean Shores. One thing to be careful of when surfing is the rip tides which can pull you out into the ocean if you get caught in one and don't know how to get out of. The tip is to swim PARALLEL until you get out of the rip tide.
- 2) Playing/relaxing on the beach: Let's face it, most people go to the Ocean for the beach! Ocean Shores has over six miles of sandy beaches, which are HUGE especially at low tides. Bring yourself a beach chair and some sand buckets and you and your family can spend the whole day walking the beach, looking for sand dollars and shells, making sand castles, playing in the surf (at least in the summer when the water temperature is decent), flying kites, or just plain sitting in your beach chair reading a book and relaxing with the sights, smells and sounds of the ocean surf. The beach is so huge at Ocean Shores that you never feel crowded, even in the summer time when tourist activity picks up. You don't really need to bring too many beach supplies with you either, as there are many shops in town that sell sand pails, kites, etc. etc.
- 3) Hot tubs/swimming pools: There are many motels at Ocean Shores but the Sands Resort has private hot tubs and two swimming pools: an indoor pool and an outdoor pool. After boogie board surfing there's nothing like soaking in the hot tub. Also, you never know what the weather will be like in Ocean Shores (one time a few years back it was foggy and rainy for the entire week I was there in August!) so it's good to have some indoor water activities when it's cold and rainy outside.
- 4) Moped riding on the beach: It's a total blast bombing down the beach on a moped, and there are several places in Ocean Shores where you can rent mopeds by the hour. The rental shops also rent out all sorts of other pedal-operated vehicles: 3-wheelers, bicycles, and 4-wheeled gizmos that up to four people can ride which don't operate too well on the sandy beach but are much fun pedaling around town. Located throughout downtown Ocean Shores are vendors who rent novelty bikes, surreys, carts and mopeds. These rentals are nearly as popular as horseback riding on the beach. They are rented in 30 minute increments. Moped rentals do require a driver's license to rent and drive, and they must obey the laws of the road. Check out Affordable Mopeds (located at 896 Ocean Shores Blvd., Ocean Shores, WA 98569)
- 5) Biking: Ocean Shores offers excellent biking with very little elevation change (Ocean Shores is virtually flat), and with numerous bike trails. With 120 miles of picturesque roadways, this is the perfect place to bring your bikes for a relaxing sojourn. There are marked bike routes, and some of the best and most scenic are on the bay side of Ocean Shores. Cycle your way from one side of the peninsula to the other, stopping to appreciate the sites normally missed in a car. Most of the major roads have marked bike lanes for your safety. With more roads than many large cities, you'll want to bring along a map just in case you lose your way
- 6) Horseback riding on the beach: Horseback riding is available on the beach where you ride slowly down the beach as a group. Horseback Riding is available on the beach as well as trail rides. A very popular activity for non-riders as well as the pros. Available year round, but call to make sure. Chenois Creek Horse Rentals (360) 533-5591. Honey Pearl Ranch offers horseback riding for children and adults. You can ride on the ranch year-round, on the beach from February to September or choose pony rides for children under age 7. To ride the horses, the weight limit is 240 pounds, only one person is allowed on a horse at a time, and horseback rides on the beach must be at a walking pace. No running or cantering on the beach is allowed. Honey Pearl Ranch 32 Humptulips Valley Road Ocean Shores, WA 98569 360-580-1150 honeypearl.com.
- 7) Kite flying on the beach: One of the most popular and fun activities to do on the beach in Ocean Shores is flying kites. There is a great shop with a huge variety of kites, windsocks, beach toys and much much more. Kite flying at Ocean Shores is terrific. A prevailing breeze off the Pacific almost guarantees kite flying weather every day of the year. And there are plenty of places in Ocean Shores to purchase everything from a basic kite to multi-layered and fighting kites. Enjoy the Ocean Shores International Kite Challenge, one of Washington's largest kite festivals featuring stunt kite competitions, displays, fun fly's, free kite flying lessons, merchants, beach vendors and more. June 2nd, 3rd and 4th
- 8) Ocean Shores Interpretive Center and Museum. . Ocean Shores Interpretive Center, a non-profit organization, is free to visit. The center provides information, hands-on exploration, exhibits with animals and a movie. Features include a new habitat room, expanded outdoor exhibits, a children's area, geology exhibits, an eagle's nest and a history of the SS Catala. This small museum, interpretive center and tourist information center is quite good for a city of this size, and has quite a lot of local information, both for the city and for the surrounding area. Included in the collection here are various animal and bird specimens, including pieces of whale skeleton, and some other impressive finds. If you find yourself tiring of the rain as you drive up or down the Olympic National Park loop, you may want to stop in here for a little bit of local information. It does take some time to get all the way out to the end of the peninsula where the interpretive center is located, but it may be worth a trip if you want to find out a bit more about the region. During the winter months (October 1 to March 31), the center is open Saturday and Sunday only, while during the summer months April 1 to September 31) it is open daily. From April 1 to Sept. 30

- 19) Bird Watching: Ocean Shores is one of the premier bird watching sites in the Northwest. This is a fantastic place for bird watching and the Audubon Society has written books about the birds in this area. Damon Point State Park (also known as Protection Island) is very popular and is one of the only known nesting sites for the Snowy Plover. There are over 300 different species of birds including brown pelicans, peregrine falcons, herons, quail and pheasant. From waterfowl to migratory birds, predators to prey, you'll marvel at the action and diversity.
- 20) State Parks:

Damon Point State Park is certainly not your typical state park. It is a beach only, with no real facilities of any sort. While the public is allowed on the wet sand area of the beach, a considerable portion of Damon Point is set aside as nesting habitat for the snowy plover. Huge developments along the coast of Oregon and Washington have eliminated a considerable portion of the sand dunes that are critical nesting habitat for these birds, and thus the need for conservation of this area - which is one of the few on this peninsula that still has reasonably intact sand dunes for nesting of the birds. However, it is a state park rather than a wildlife conservation area, and as such there is a lot of human traffic along the beach, including a lot of dog walking, kite flying, and various other activities. Therefore, I am not convinced that bird watchers are that likely to see any snowy plovers here, even though it is regarded as a "known nesting area" for the snowy plover. Other than the grass and gravel area along the road, there isn't any parking here. The nearest restrooms are at the campground operated by the Quinault Indian Tribe. However, those are not public restrooms, and are not for use by those other than marina and campground users. The park is day use only, and open 8 to 5 all year. DANGER: This state park consists of a sand peninsula heading into Gray's Harbor. It is important to note that during the highest of high tides, much of the peninsula gets cut off from the mainland. Please take a tide table and know when it is time to head back to shore!

Ocean City State Park. For those of you who like to camp, there is Ocean City State Park located just a few miles from Ocean Shores, on the coast one-and-a-half miles north on Highway 115, Ocean Shores, WA. This is a 170 acre state park with decent enough camping grounds and easy access to the Ocean beaches.

- 21) City Parks: Ocean Shores has 3 parks open to the public. They are all located in the northern section of town, on or near Duck Lake.

Residents and visitors alike use Chinook Park for the conveniences it offers. This 3.2 acre park is located about mid point on the east side of Duck Lake. It is the perfect place to launch your boat if you want to ski or thrill the kids on the inflatable doughnut. A recently constructed, ADA fishing dock beckons the young and old to cast one's line and see if the fish are nibbling. Duck Lake's three little islands are just west of Chinook Park, and if you are lucky, you might see a deer swimming to one of them. Swings, a slide, and climbing equipment will keep the young children smiling, while an open field nearby is available for soccer, kickball, or flying a kite. 23) Wildlife Refuge/Forest:

Weatherwax Forest is the last remaining native-style forest on the Ocean Park peninsula. As the peninsula was logged in the early 1900s, there are no real old growth trees here, or anywhere else on the peninsula. However, what is here is preserved second growth, with a huge effort put in to maintaining native plants and undergrowth so that while the trees may not be old, the type of forest is typical of the ecosystem that would have been found here as a native ecosystem. The eastern edge of the park land borders the body of water known as "Duck Lake", which is part of the artificial canal system dug into the peninsula when it started being developed as a resort community in the 1960s. There was a bench next to one of the trails, but otherwise there did not seem to be any other such facilities anywhere in the park. It appeared to be a memorial bench, based on the engraved plaque on the bench, and possibly as time goes on more such benches will be added to the forest. The forest area is only 121 acres (49 hectares), so the property really isn't extremely extensive. However, it is unique in its preservation of a native part of the peninsula's ecosystem. There are several trails through the park, the main section of which is along a power line corridor. Other trails are narrow dirt pathways through the dense forest. There are no restroom facilities in this park

Oyhut Wildlife Area. A magnet drawing birders from all over is the Oyhut Wildlife Area. 682 acres of wetlands and tidal flats home to blue herons, brown pelicans, pheasants, snowy plovers, and the list goes on and on

- 24) Ocean Shores North Jetty. Walk the 100 yards to see the jetty, birds and the absolutely outstanding beach. This is the best area of beach in the Ocean Shores area. Jetty is fun and really enjoy the pelicans. When the tide is low there is lots of beach to walk to gather shells. Sometimes seals will leave their pups here while they hunt. It is illegal to touch the seal pups. A lovely place to watch the sunset. Less traffic than the main Ocean Shores beachfront. The view is spectacular. The North Jetty is a great place to find a comfortable rock and watch the sea. Relaxing, calming and ever changing is our beautiful Pacific Ocean. Spend the day with a pick nick lunch if it is sunny, wear a heavy duty rain coat and boots if it's windy and rainy. Be sure to bring binoculars because you may see seal and other sea live.
- 25) Boat Ramps and Rentals: Ocean Shores has 25 miles of freshwater lakes and canals. Duck Lake is the largest segment, and it adjoins the Grand Canal at the south end. Versatility is what makes Ocean Shores a prime destination for boating fanatics. If you are looking for a ramp to launch your boat into the ocean – the marina has a launch located on the west side. For access into the canals and lakes, the easiest launch ramps are North Bay Park off of Albatross on Duck Lake Drive or Chinook Park on Duck Lake. A power boat launch and dock is available at North Bay Park. Hand launching for kyaks and canoes is available at parks throughout the city. Please respect the speed limit and the property rights of lake front homeowners. New is the Runabout Rentals on Point Brown by the Police Station - they offer pedal boats by the hour for cruising the canal.
